

The Violence Research And Prevention Program

Current Research on Intimate Partner Violence Seminar

Wednesday 13 May 2009

Domestic violence is an issue that impacts many families across the community. The range of health and safety consequences are numerous and preventing intimate partner violence requires a more developed research base. Please join us to hear from a range of researchers undertaking important research on intimate partner violence.

Keynote Speakers

Silke Meyer, PhD Scholar

Seeking help for intimate partner violence: A qualitative examination of victims' responses

Nada Ibrahim, PhD Scholar

Intimate partner violence in the Australian Muslim community: Struggling with definition

Dr. Elena Marchetti, Griffith University School of Law

Sentencing Indigenous offenders of partner violence: A fundamental comparative analysis of Indigenous sentencing courts and specialist family violence courts

Zoe Rathus, Griffith University School of Law

Family Violence and Shared Parenting: What we know so far about the impact of the 2006 changes to the Family Law Act

Wednesday 13 May 2009

4:30pm - 6:30pm

Arrival Catering from 4:15pm

Social Sciences Building (M10), Room 5.01,
Mt Gravatt Campus, Griffith University

Arrival catering provided.

Further information visit www.griffith.edu.au/kceljag

Free Seminar. RSVP essential as numbers are limited.

Email: kceljag-events@griffith.edu.au or Phone: 3735 5997
by Wednesday 6 May.

The violence research and prevention program is a cross university, interdisciplinary research program that examines the causes, and consequences, of violence and various strategies for its prevention.

