

National Coastal Urbanisation Symposium

Gold Coast, Monday 29 March 2004

Organised by Griffith University and Gold Coast City Council

This landmark one-day symposium will feature Australia's leading demographers and urban scholars who will outline and explain the population and settlement shifts that are occurring along Australia's coastline. The intention is to provide quality, scholarly input into community and policy discussions about coastal urban shifts.

Issues addressed will include:

- What population and settlement changes are occurring along Australia's coast and how significant are these in the national context?
- Who is moving to coastal Australia and why? Who isn't?
- What implications does coastal urban change pose for infrastructure provision and resource management?

Speakers will include:

- Prof Graeme Hugo, Federation Fellow, University of Adelaide
- Prof Ian Burnley and Prof Peter Murphy, University of NSW, authors of Seachange: Movement from Metropolitan to Arcadian Australia, UNSW Press, 2003
- Prof Kevin O'Connor, The University of Melbourne
- Prof Patrick Troy AO, Australian National University
- Prof Brendan Gleeson, Griffith University

Venue: Robina Community Centre, Robina Town Centre, Gold Coast, Queensland

Time: 9.30 a.m.—5.30 p.m.

Cost: $77.00 (GST inclusive) (teas and lunch provided)
