

Grant Writing Workshop

Write a successful research grant application

Our workshop is designed to:

- ◆ help you to understand what is required to write a successful research funding grant application by dissecting each component of a competitive grant proposal and discussing ways to effectively write each section
- ◆ give advice specific to primary health care and population health professionals applying to other sources to fund research projects
- ◆ provide hands on practical assistance in writing your proposal.

When: 9am to 4pm Thursday, 11 September 2008

Where: Training Room 3, Level 3
Queensland Health Building
147-163 Charlotte Street, Brisbane

Cost: Free, lunch provided, bookings essential

9am to 1pm - Information session: (includes break for morning tea)

The morning session offers informative presentations covering topics such as developing your research question, justifying the relevance of your research, choosing the right funding agency and collaborators, writing strategies, tips on getting funded, with examples relevant to primary health care and population health research grants.

2pm to 4pm - Practical session: (Participants must have attended the morning session)

If you are applying for research funding this session is a must. It provides the opportunity to work on your application with hands-on, practical support and guidance. For information on funding sources relevant to primary health care and population health workers will be provided on the day, or on request at registration.

People can attend the morning session only, or both morning and afternoon sessions.

About the trainer: Kathy Heathcote MPH Dip App Epi. Kathy has 25 years experience working in public health. She has worked in public health research for the University of Sydney, University of Newcastle and University of Queensland; the Cancer Council NSW, NSW Health and Queensland Health. Kathy has published in peer-reviewed journals, she has taught research methods and grant writing at university and has considerable experience in grant writing for research funding.

Bookings:

Fax registration form to (07) 33821338 or phone Xanthe Golenko: (07) 33821337.

Xanthe works part time, so please leave your name and contact phone number and she will return your call to get your registration details.

Limited places available.

This workshop is presented by Griffith PHCRED funded by the Australian Government