Cities on the Edge

“An economy of growth and endless expanding abundance eventually reaches its limits, and now the entire material system is threatened with natural default.”

By 2026 Brisbane may be home to 4.5 million residents and overtake Melbourne as the nation’s second largest metropolis.

Join Brendan Gleeson, one of Australia’s most outstanding urban planners, as he examines the impact of rapid growth on our cities and suggests solutions to make them better places to live and work.

Cities on the Edge sets the big picture agenda for a new generation of thinking about urban planning.

Brendan Gleeson is Director of Griffith University’s Urban Research Program and the author of Australian Heartlands (Allen & Unwin, 2006). He was appointed to the Board of the Urban Land Development Authority in November 2007.
