

Urban Research Program

2008 Seminar Series

Associate Professor Darryl Low Choy - URP

Planning on the edge: Planning and management responses to peri-urbanisation

The edges of our cities are areas of rapid change that defy address through traditional urban and rural planning processes. Is a new form of settlement emerging in Australia? Why has past management not been successful? How should future challenges be confronted?

Darryl Low Choy is an associate professor in the planning discipline of Griffith Environment. He has done extensive regional research in Queensland.

Wednesday 2 April 2008

12.15 p.m. - 1.30 p.m.

Nathan Campus - Room N55 1.12