Dr Ian Smith

Spatial planning and climate change: A UK perspective

Dr Ian Smith is the Director of the Cities Research Centre (UK), and a Senior Research Fellow at the University of West England (Bristol).

He has recently been awarded a multi-year research grant to investigate suburban neighbourhood adaptation for a changing climate (SNACC). The goal of the project is to identify effective, practical and acceptable means of suburban re-design.

Dr Smith is visiting Australia as a guest of the Urban Research Program.
