Kathleen Daly is Professor of Criminology and Criminal Justice, Griffith University (Brisbane).

She received her PhD in sociology from the University of Massachusetts-Amherst (1983), was Visiting Assistant Professor at the State University of New York at Albany (1982-83), Assistant Professor (1983-88) and Associate Professor (1988-92) at Yale University, and Visiting Associate Professor at the University of Michigan-Ann Arbor (1992-95). She came to Australia as a Senior Fulbright Scholar in 1995 at the Australian National University before taking up her current position at Griffith University in 1996.

Professor Daly has authored or co-authored two books, four edited collections, seven major reports, and over 75 articles in journals, edited collections, and law reviews. She received the Michael J. Hindelang award in 1995 from the American Society of Criminology for her book, Gender, Crime and, Punishment (Yale University Press 1994) and the Distinguished Scholar Award from the Division of Women and Crime, American Society of Criminology (1994). She published an edited collection (with Lisa Maher), Criminology at the Crossroads: Feminist Readings in Crime and Justice (1998) and is editor of Crime and Justice: A Guide to Criminology (2006) (with Andrew Goldsmith and Mark Israel).

From 1998 to 2006, she received three major Australian Research Council (ARC) grants on innovative justice practices: restorative justice for young offenders in South Australia (1998-99), race and gender politics of new justice practices (2001-03), and the contested politics of the new justice (2004-06). These projects supported a program of research on restorative justice and Indigenous justice, comparing developments in Australia with New Zealand and Canada. In 2008, Professor Daly launched an international project on innovative responses to sexual violence, also funded by the ARC (2008-2011). In 2009, as co-PI with Elena Marchetti and Jackie Huggins, Daly began collaborating on a project on optimal approaches to sentencing Indigenous partner violence, funded by the ARC (2009-2013). From 2005 to 2009, she was President of the Australian and New Zealand Society of Criminology (ANZSOC), and in 2007 was elected a Fellow of the Academy of the Social Sciences in Australia.
