Understanding and Preventing Domestic Violence: A One Day Symposium

Friday 12 September 2008

9:00 am - 5:00 pm

Rydges Hotel

South Bank, Brisbane, Queensland, Australia

About the Symposium

Domestic violence is a significant issue that presents many challenges to public health, welfare and public safety. The problems that often emerge from domestic violence are substantial and require effective responses across the government and non-government sectors.

Effective responses to domestic violence require a comprehensive research evidence base as well as effective partnerships between researchers, policy makers, and practitioners. This symposium provides a unique opportunity to be informed about some of the latest research on domestic violence as well as some of the challenges and latest evidence regarding effective responses. The importance of implementing effective interventions to prevent domestic violence into the future is a prominent theme of this symposium.

Key Themes

The symposium includes several national and international experts on domestic and intimate partner violence. Some of the key themes addressed during the day will include:

- Effective police and health service responses to domestic violence
- International initiatives to understand justice responses to domestic violence
- Examining pathways to intimate partner homicide in Australia
- Understanding help seeking responses to domestic violence
- Examining what works in the area of batterer treatment
- Uncovering the scope of the problem of domestic violence in the Islamic community

Who Should Attend?

The symposium will be of interest to researchers and professionals working in crime and justice policy and practice including human services professionals, justice officials, police, correctional, court, and health officials, professionals working directly with victims of domestic or sexual violence, as well as officers working in crime prevention, as well as related professionals in the non-government sector.

Hosted by

The Symposium is hosted by Griffith University's Key Centre for Ethics, Law, Justice and Governance and the Violence Research Program.

Date: Friday 12 September 2008, 9:00 am – 5:00 pm

Venue: Rydges Hotel, South Bank, Brisbane, QLD
