Planning in the Sun: The case of Linz Solar City, Austria

In the early 1990s the Austrian town of Linz began developing a master-planned 'solar city' for 6,000 homes with the objective of comprehensive use of solar and other alternative energy sources. This seminar will outline the objectives and outcomes from the Linz project and the lessons learned for solar urban planning.

Dr. Raimund Gutmann is a social researcher and private consultant with wohnbund:consult, based in Vienna and Salzburg Austria. Dr Gutmann holds a PhD from the University of Salzburg and works in the field of urban design, housing research, social infrastructure and community work.
