THE CONFERENCE

TechNet (formerly TechTrain) National Conferences are conducted annually in a different state or territory of Australia. Originally developed as a tool for technical staff to network with each other, TechNet has now grown to include technical staff from all Australian Universities who present a wide range of technical papers and posters and showcase innovative work. This year invitations to TechNet 2007 have also been made to international technical staff in the local Pacific region. This is the 8th TechNet National Conference and the theme of this year's Conference is:

“Tech Smarter: Doing It Better, Doing It Different”

CONFERENCE DATES and VENUE

TechNet 2007 will commence with Registration on Wednesday 4th July followed by a Delegate Welcome function that afternoon and will conclude with an informal End of Conference function on Friday 6th July following the final Conference presentation. The date of the Conference has been planned to coincide with the common Australian Vice Chancellor's Committee recess period so that the maximum number of University delegates will be able to attend.

The venue will be Griffith University's Gold Coast campus site at Parklands – the campus has state-of-the-art facilities that will showcase the diversity of technical staff work areas. As the pre-eminent Conference and vacation destination in Australia – the Gold Coast venue is expected to attract high delegate attendance.

Pre-Conference tours of other Griffith University sites will be available on Wednesday 4th July. The TechNet2007 Conference web site and booklet will highlight details of these tours.

DELEGATE PROFILE

Approximately 300 delegates are expected to attend TechNet2007. Delegates will include researchers, laboratory and technical managers, industry experts and “hands-on” technical staff from government and private enterprise. These people are often the ones that make the decisions regarding specific items to be purchased for their work environment and so this Conference provides an ideal opportunity for Sponsors and Trade Exhibitors to target them in one location. A contingency of overseas delegates is also expected to attend.

Delegates will include technical professionals from:

- Science and health teaching and research laboratories;
- Audio-visual studios;
- Film and television studios;
- Drama theatres;
- Arts studios/workshops;
- Mechanical and electronics workshops;
- Instrument labs;
- Laboratory management;
- Health and safety;
- Animal facilities;
- University stores;
- Nursing work areas;
- Medical clinical skills facilities;
- Information technology support facilities
- Education training

No other Conference is able to provide a focus for such a wide variety of technical professionals.

INVITATION TO SPONSOR

The TechNet 2007 Conference Committee is very pleased to invite your participation in the 8th National TechNet Conference.

TechNet 2007 provides technical staff the forum to exchange information, to showcase their skills, designs, and ideas; and to compare work standards amongst like professionals within the teaching and research and industry environments. The Conference will incorporate provocative discussion through presentations, special guest speakers, trade exhibits, tours of campus facilities and entertainment mediums to showcase the extraordinary discipline and diversity that technical staff deliver. Delegates will have the opportunity to engage in activities that reflect communal values and objectives; engendering technical community pride, a sense of place and participation.

The theme for the TechNet 2007 Conference is:

“TECH SMARTER: DOING IT BETTER, DOING IT DIFFERENT”

During a time of rapid change, technical staff are continually challenged to provide high quality outcomes by working smarter. Technical staff have responded to these pressures through adaptation, innovation, and improvisation. We are doing it better by doing it different. This journey has forced many changes with outstanding results that are advantageous; more efficient and reflective of today's fast paced society. We are shifting resources to meet the changing needs.

As already described, the delegate profile will be wide ranging providing an unprecedented opportunity to reach a diverse range of potential customers. The layout of the Conference venue will be structured to maximise networking opportunities.

TechNet 2007 is an opportunity for you to reach a local, national and international audience of technical staff to promote your products and services.

In the following pages there are listed a range of sponsor, exhibition and advertising options for you to consider. All packages are negotiable and can be tailored to suit your specific marketing objectives.

In order to secure your participation in this exciting Conference, please complete the attached Reservation Form and return it to the Trade Exhibits and Sponsorship Coordinator as soon as possible.

All prices outlined within this prospectus document are inclusive of GST.
