The Centre for Work, Organisation and Wellbeing invites you to a seminar:

“HDR Development workshop: How to write the research methods section of journal articles with qualitative data”

by

Professor Fang Lee Cooke

When: Thursday 13th October, 2011 - 12:00pm to 2:00pm
Where: Room 2.04 Building N63 (Business 3), Nathan campus
Food: Lunch will be served upon arrival; please RSVP by Monday 10th Oct

Abstract: Writing the Research Methods (RM) section for a journal article is significantly different from cutting and pasting parts of the RM chapters of one’s PhD thesis. In this workshop, we look at how the RM section of a journal article is expected to be written from a reviewer and journal editor’s point of view. We do so by examining the RM section of a number of articles submitted/published in high ranking journals. We compare the first and the final version to see how improvements can be made. The workshop is aimed to help HDRs develop their publication skills. It will be delivered in an interactive manner, as learning to publish journal articles with qualitative data is a very hands-on process that requires workshop participants to participate in the learning in a proactive manner individually and as a group.
