Kathleen Daly is Professor of Criminology and Criminal Justice, Griffith University (Brisbane). She writes on gender, race, crime and justice; and on restorative, Indigenous, and international justice. Her book, Gender, Crime, and Punishment (1994) received the Michael Hindelang award from the American Society of Criminology. She published an edited collection (with Lisa Maher), Criminology at the Crossroads: Feminist Readings in Crime and Justice (1998) and is co-editor of Crime and Justice: A Guide to Criminology (2006). She travelled to Australia in 1995 as a Senior Fulbright Scholar to study restorative justice. From 1998 to 2006, she received three major Australian Research Council (ARC) grants to direct a program of research on restorative justice and the race and gender politics of “new justice” practices in Australia, New Zealand, and Canada. In 2008, Professor Daly has launched an international project on innovative responses to sexual violence, also funded by the ARC (2008-2011). In addition to the books and edited collections, she has published over 60 articles in journals, edited collections, and law reviews. She is President of the Australian and New Zealand Society of Criminology (ANZSOC), and a Fellow of the Academy of the Social Sciences in Australia.
