The Centre for Work, Organisation and Wellbeing Invites you to a seminar

IS THERE ANYTHING SMART ABOUT HIGH PERFORMANCE WORKPLACES?

Where: N63_0.01
When: Tuesday 25th March
9.30am

Presented by
Professor Adrian Wilkinson, Griffith University,
Professor Pauline Stanton, LaTrobe University
Dr Jimmy Donaghey, Queen’s University, Belfast
Dr Tony Dundon, National University of Ireland

Many criticisms of so-called High Performance Workplaces (HPW) and the associated research centre on too optimistic interpretation of results. Some researchers claim that this optimism is the result of HR researchers asking HR practitioners if HR practices work (cf. Godard, 2004; Wall and Wood, 2005). In the context of the Queensland government’s investment in promoting and developing Queensland as ‘The Smart State’, the Centre for Work, Organisation and Wellbeing presents a seminar which draws together some wider perspectives on HPW in an attempt to gather a rounded understanding of the direction for all workplace stakeholders – employees, unions, managers and the state.

For any further information in regards to the seminar or presenters please go to the WOW website: