Introduction

The Master of Learning and Teaching in Higher Education is a coursework masters. It provides students with an integrated and focused opportunity to develop a rich understanding of teaching and learning processes in higher education. It aims to enhance students’ capacity for designing, developing and delivering effective programs, courses, and teaching at the university level and to develop research skills and skills in leadership in higher education. It is designed to improve the likelihood of professional advancement through demonstrated ability in these areas. The program also provides you with enhanced opportunity for higher level study.

Program overview

The content of this program comprises three sections:

- Theory and practice in higher education, including the nature and interdependence of learning, learners, learning contexts, curriculum design, innovation, assessment and evaluation;
- Research methods and the design of educational research; and
- A research dissertation in which students must research a topic in higher education, usually linked to their academic practice.

Graduates of the Graduate Certificate of Higher Education program may elect to undertake the Master of Learning and Teaching in Higher Education. Since the two core courses for the Graduate Certificate are required courses for the coursework Masters degree, the former program articulates seamlessly with the latter.

The recommended sequence is as follows:

Year 1 - Semester 1 (February to June)
7267EBL/ 7267EPS - Research Methods in Education;
7013GIH - Learning and Teaching in Higher Education;

Year 1 - Semester 2 (July to November)
7015EBL/7015EPS - Educational Research Design;
7014GIH - Curriculum Design, Assessment and Evaluation.

Attendance requirements vary for these courses. You are advised to check the course outlines for details.

Year 2 - Semester 1
Dissertation – 20cp

Year 2 - Semester 2
Dissertation – 20cp
