Griffith University and AOC partnership

Griffith has been named the exclusive Australian Olympic Pathway University—extending our lead in giving support to elite athletes.

AUSTRALIAN OLYMPIC PATHWAY
UNIVERSITY

Griffith University is proud to be the exclusive Australian Olympic Pathway University in partnership with the Australian Olympic Committee (AOC). Together, Griffith and the AOC are working to support Australia's elite athletes in their pursuit of academic and sporting excellence.

Through the Griffith Sports College and its dedicated Elite Athlete Support Program, Griffith provides flexible study options, mentoring and tailored delivery to help student-athletes succeed on and off the field.

With more than 600 scholarships on offer and a long-standing commitment to inclusive, purpose-driven education, Griffith empowers athletes to build rewarding careers while achieving their sporting goals, supporting them to thrive in competition, in the classroom and in life after sport.

“This agreement ensures more Olympians will have the opportunity to gain scholarships at Griffith and recognises the University’s outstanding sporting and training facilities, and flexible study schedules.”

MARK ARBIB

Australian Olympic Committee CEO

“I believe it’s important for athletes to prepare for a transition after competitive sport. Balancing training and study is never easy, but having such a great support network at Griffith through the Sport College has been wonderful. It has allowed me the flexibility and opportunity to adapt my study program, so I can focus on my competition and training for those big moments.”

High-performance swimming program

Swimming Australia and Griffith University have a four year high-performance partnership until 2028. Through this partnership, Griffith University Swim Club is proudly recognised as a Swimming Australia high-performance support hub—the only one-of-its-kind on the Gold Coast. Under the leadership of world-renowned coach Melanie Marshall MBE OLY and supported by David Thomas, the club runs an elite training program that has produced multiple Olympians. In addition, a development pathway program is offered across two levels of squad, coached by Thomas Fraser-Holmes OLY and Brett Shanks, providing opportunities for emerging swimmers to progress to the highest level.

“I’m excited to be leading the Griffith swim club in the swimming Australia supported hub. We are already coaching some of the best swimmers in the country and I’m looking at the next generation of talent towards LA and then Brisbane Olympic Games.”

MEL MARSHALL MBE OLY
Griffith University Head Coach

“I believe that a balanced life is an extremely important part of an athlete’s life and without the help and guidance of the Sports College I wouldn’t be pursuing dreams both in and out of the pool.”

Partnerships and networks

Sporting partnerships matter at Griffith, playing a vital role in enhancing the overall effectiveness and impact of our Sports Strategy. We work closely with leading sport institutions, organisations, academies, and professional sporting teams to create university-wide collaborations. These partnerships open the doors for current students to be involved in internships, graduate programs and research opportunities, along with offering new avenues for learning. Our collaborations also focus on high-performance programs, elite athlete support, innovation, sports science/sports medicine support, community programs aligning aims and values, as well as sports strategy and research focus areas. These partnerships foster a two-way exchange of opportunities and expertise.

Leading from the top

Our leaders know what it's like to perform at the top of their sport.

Griffith alumnus and Gold-medal winning Olympian Naomi McCarthy (water polo) combines her experience as an elite athlete with management expertise to help our talented athletes thrive.

Tom Fields brings a wealth of knowledge to Griffith as a retired professional AFL player and has an extensive background helping athletes find their identity after sport.

Naomi and Tom understand the unique pressures and demands elite athletes face trying to balance their training, competition and study—offering mentoring and hands-on support that's both effective and empathetic.

“Taking time to recover and rehabilitate from training is essential in sports. Thanks to the flexibility at Griffith Sports College, we can easily listen to lectures on our laptops during this downtime. It’s crucial to make the most of this time by focusing on personal and professional development, helping us smoothly transition out of sports when the time comes.”
